Paint & Household

Q.) have a hot water radiator under my bedroom window. The plaster behind the radiator and under the window is crumbling How can I repair this area without removing the radiator.

A. I'm afraid there is no other alternative them to remove the radiator first. Make sure the water is turned off and removed from the radiator before you start.

A combination of heat (from the radiator) and moisture (from the window) is the reason for crumbling plaster Remove all loose plaster. You may have to go down to the lathe. Plaster Patch may be suitable to patch a small area such as yours. Keep in mind that plaster sets very fast, usually in a matter of minutes. So, either work fast, or only mix small amounts Structolite is a cement like plaster mix would be best to build up the area to within ½ inch and then finish coat with gauging plaster or plaster of Paris. Structolite affords you about 15 minutes before setting The only problem is that Structolite is hard to sand, and usually cannot be put chaned in small amounts

Q Thank you for your column. It has always been so helpful to me. I hope you might be able to help me on this one. My husband's grave marker at Fairlawn is badly tarnished. I have tried cleaning it, but to no avail. Can you help?

A. This is a perfect opportunity for me to mention my son, Pvt. Brad D'Angelo, who is home on leave from the Army in Fort Leonard Wood in Missouri. The first thought that popped into Brad's head as well as any person who has served in the Armed Forces, is "BRASSO." How well I remember being in the MP's. "brassoing" belt buckles and collar brass until I could see the reflection of my face in them.

A soft cloth and lots of elbow grease should be all that is needed to restore the luster to bronze

Q. I just purchased a small pottery bank that says "Blades." on the side. How was it used?

A. You own a razor blade bank from the disposable metal razor blade became popular in the early 1930s there was the problem of disposing of the old razor blades. Throwing them away was dangerous for children There were many contests in newspapers offering prizes for the best whatever. Manufacturers soon began using the razor-blade "bank" as a promotional item. Some companies gave away metal boxes with slotted lids and a few were given away used-blade storage Sometimes the bank was part of a shaving set Some were made as advertising pieces marked with a company's name during Shave Safety Week American Safety Razor Company. Listerine and others put their names on the banks, which were promoted for coins or for blades.

In the 1930s, an easy blade-disposal method appeared A slot was placed in the bottom of a bathroom medicine cabinet so the used blades inserted there fell between the walls of the house Rodents and railroads also liked this solution Novelty pottery blade banks were still popular in the 1930s and were often sold at drug stores or dime stores They were often made of reversible buffers, barber poles or even animals By the 1960s, most blades were sold in throw-away plastic or metal dispensers that held the used blades and the razor-blade bank went out of style.

DOLLARS & SENSE

Be Free From Debt
by Bryon Elson

You can determine how much debt you can carry safely by dividing the amount owed on your credit cards by your annual take-home pay. The number you arrive at should be no higher than 15 to 20 percent of annual salary

Another way to judge whether you are carrying too much debt is to calculate how much money you have available each month.

Start by dividing a piece of paper into two columns In one column list any form of monthly income you receive on that piece of paper list all of your fixed and variable expenses

The difference between your monthly income and your expenses is the amount you have available for paying credit card bills

Now you have a realistic idea of how much you can afford to send to your creditors on a monthly basis If you cannot afford to send more than the minimum, or ill pay all of your creditors on time, you may be on the verge of drowning in debt

Even if your current level of debt is below the danger zone, you may be headed for credit trouble Watch for such warning signs as taking cash advances to meet current bills, ignoring credit limits, and charging daily expenses such as groceries or gasoline

To begin with, hide your credit cards and forget they exist. If your mail brings a tempting application for a pre-approved credit card, toss it out.

In many cases, debt consolidation with a home equity loan may provide an organized way to pay off debt within a specified time period However, if you are addicted to credit, the chances are good that such loans will lull you into believing that you have paid your debts and can now resume charging

Another option is to draw up an austerity budget and see if you can squeeze more cash free to pay your obligations Try to pay off more than the minimum on each of your credit cards. If you simply cannot find the money to meet your bills, you probably will need help from a CPA or a credit counselor

There are over 350 nonprofit consumer-credit counseling agencies that belong to the National Foundation for Consumer Credit. These organizations can help work out a payment plan with your creditors

These counselors charge only a nominal fee, or, in some cases, no fee at all. For a directory of locations, write to NFCC, 8701 Georgia Avenue, Suite 507, Silver Springs, Md 20910

DEAR DIANE
by Diane Van Arsdale

DEAR DIANE:
I'm 18 years old, and my mother is always getting on my case about school work, and to consider a career. She's always on me in the future. She also wants me to think about going to college to further my education. Who needs this? I want to get married as soon as I graduate from high school. Then I want to have kids of my own to raise. I will be taken care of by my husband. I won't need a career! How can I explain this to my mother?
DETERMINED

DEAR DETERMINED:
It is very foolish for a woman in this day and age to expect she will be "taken care of" by any man. For one thing it's totally unfair to place that kind of burden on a man More importantly since we now have the opportunity, women should live up to their full potential by having careers of their own Even if you do marry right after high school (too young, in my opinion), you will most likely find that you need two incomes to survive.

Listen to your mom Go to college and get an education. Believe me, you'll find a whole new world will open up to you.

DEAR DIANE:
I'm in my early 30s and have been married for seven years In the last year, our sex life has turned from great to almost nothing. I've tried some new things to spark things up, but nothing seems to work I thought perhaps he was having an affair, so I asked my husband if he was, and he claims he's not. He's never lied to me before, and I truly believe him. What can we do to bring some spark back into our sex life? My husband is a very private person regarding his sex life, so please don't tell me to see a sex therapist; he would never agree to it.
SEXLESS

DEAR SEXLESS:
Routine can severely dampen the sexual appetite, so it could be that you're involved in experiencing that things at work are getting to him, that could be why he's not that interested in sex. Also, marriages go through certain phases where sex is concerned. If you lighten up and take some pressure off you and your husband, things will most likely improve in time. If you feel the situation is deteriorating further in a few months, I believe you should see a marriage counselor

DEAR DEX
by Dexter Dyer

DEAR DEX:
I've been married to a man I'll call "Bob" twice already. Right now I'm seeing another man I'll call "Craig." Things between Craig and me have been going very well for approximately six months. We're considering moving in with one another to see how things would work should we decide to get married. But now Bob is constantly calling me and begging me that he was wrong to divorce me, and that he'll do anything for me to go back with him and remarry for the third time. I married Bob twice already because I really and truly loved him. After our last divorce, he hadn't called or shown any interest in me for a long time, and I was devastated because I was so hurt from our divorce. I was alone for a pretty long time, sometimes hoping he would call, but that call never came, and now I finally found someone whom I believe I'm fallen in love with. Craig and I have had some very special times together, and have much to explore with each other in the future. There will always be a special place in my heart for Bob, but could the third time really work in your eyes, or am I just getting myself up again? Should I stay with Craig and give this a try, even if it doesn't work between us?
CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED:
It appears to me that you are looking for a guarantee that your next relationship is going to work out. No one can give you that, and you won't accomplish it by going back to your ex-husband. However, if you still feel you are unresolved about that former relationship it wouldn't be fair of you to enter into a more committed relationship with Craig. You owe it to him to discuss the situation with the unwanted baggage of your last relationship. That is something you are going to have to ask yourself and face honestly before you can answer. You'll know what to do.

If you decide you still need to explore your feelings for Bob, I strongly suggest you don't marry him. You can see each other and have a relationship without getting married. There were reasons for your other two break-ups and whatever those problems were they're not going to just go away because you decide to marry for the third time. You need to address those problems and solve them before marrying again Good luck.

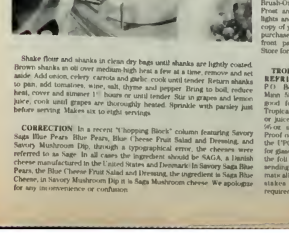
THE CHOPPING BLOCK
by Philomena Corradeno

It's the season for stews and soups, not only because we're still recovering from the holiday budget blues, but because they are comforting and warming, easy to prepare and need little attention once they hit the heat.

Today's stew makes use of beans, one of the most economical meat cuts around, and even more flavorful than the expensive stew meats, and higher-priced cuts. Grapes give it a unique twist and taste and an unusual crunchy texture

BONES AND GRAPES STEW

½ cup flour
4 pounds (2-inch thick pieces) veal, lamb or beef shanks
¼ cup vegetable oil
1 large onion, coarsely chopped
3 stalks celery, diced
4 medium carrots, diced
1 clove garlic, minced
1 16-oz. can tomatoes, cut into chunks
½ cup dry white wine
1 to 2 teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon thyme, crushed
½ teaspoon pepper
2 cups California red or green grapes, halved and seeded if necessary



Shake flour and shanks in clean dry bags until shanks are lightly coated. Brown shanks in oil over medium-high heat a few at a time, remove and set aside. Add onion, celery, carrots and garlic; cook until tender Return shanks to pan, add tomatoes, wine, salt, thyme and pepper Bring to boil; reduce heat, cover and simmer 1½ hours or until tender Stir in grapes and lemon before serving Makes six to eight servings.

CORRECTION In a recent "Chopping Block" column featuring Savory Sagu Blue Pears Blue Pears, Blue Cheese Fruit Salad and Dressing, and Savory Mushroom Dip, through a typographical error, the cheeses were referred to as 'sage. In all cases the ingredient should be 'SAGA, a Danish cheese manufactured in the United States and Denmark In Savory Sagu Blue Pears, the Blue Cheese Fruit Salad and Dressing, the ingredient is Sagu Blue Cheese, in Savory Mushroom Dip it is Saga Mushroom cheese. We apologize for any inconvenience or confusion

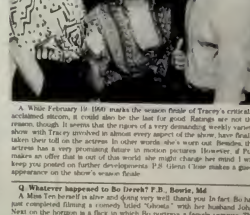
Q What's the word on Carol Burnett's new weekly series? I haven't heard or seen anything about it and was wondering if she has changed her mind about returning to the rigors of a weekly show J.E., Hagerstown, Md

A. I card has not changed her mind about doing a weekly series even though she is gracing herself for the rhores of failure — something Carol has never had to deal with on the small screen. The show is tentatively scheduled for a March debut. NBC has not yet announced a day or time slot as of this writing. The holdup on the show is that good scripts have been hard to come by. The premise of Carol's new show is to introduce new story lines and different characters every week. Carol, though will be not be repeating any of her famous characters from her his 1970s variety show on CBS.

Q I heard a rumor that "The Tracey Ullman Show" will not be returning to the Fox Network next fall True or false? E.A., Ardmore, Pa.



A. The press isn't picking on Roseanne Rosenmber; she was the one who made sure the press was there when she wanted coverage — every the coverage later turned out to be unflattering against her Sure the press covers all the problems on her show but since when did a TV sitcom come under the protection of the press privilege? Besides, we wouldn't know what happened behind the scenes unless we talked with the show told the press about it.

In defense of Roseanne Barr I have to say she is a very talented woman with a great gift for using humor to pierce much of the hypocrisy of our society Next time you hear her being unruly or whiny really listen to what she has to say You may learn something.

Q A friend came back from Europe and said some of the papers are predicting Fraser is going to take over Monaco because of a problem with the heirs to the throne. Can you explain this? Donna, Philadelphia, Pa. (Grace Kelly's hometown)

A. A Monagasque living in the United States told me France and Monaco agreed at one time that if there were no male heir to the throne, Monaco would allow itself to be absorbed into France At this time Price Albert the only son born to Prince Rainier and the late Grace Kelly remains the favorable heir But if he doesn't marry and have children that could be the end of Monaco's independence unless of course they realize we're almost into the 21st century,and recognize Princess Caroline and her young sisters P.S Marrying late seems to be a formidable male tradition Prince Rainier married relatively late

Q Why did James DePalva (Max) say "Our Life to Live" decide to leave the show? Walnut, Iowa

A DePalva, who is married in real life to actress Mary Rowe decided to leave because the couple is expecting their first child and have decided to return to Los Angeles "OTL" is shot in New York City
